Gold Star Park: A lasting memorial for those who sacrificed it all

Let us never forget those who paid the ultimate price for our country and to honor their families. With that dignified goal in mind, a Gold Star Memorial Monument was dedicated Saturday morning on Harmar Hill in Gold Star Park, formerly known as Lookout Park.

The rain held off, the American flag was raised and Carlin's Battery "D" 1st West Virginia Light Artillery group from Parkersburg fired off a Civil War cannon to get the memorial dedication under way. In addition, Gabby Martinez of Marietta High School performed the National Anthem, Veritas Classical Academy sang patriotic songs and Susan Henning Smith played Taps during the patriotic event.

A Gold Star Family member can be any relative: mother, father, stepmother, stepfather, adoptive or foster parents, wife, husband, child, stepchild, adopted child, brothers, sisters, half brothers or sisters, grandparents, grandchildren, aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces or nephews of any loved one who made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom.

The Gold Star Family Memorial was created by 'Congressional Medal of Honor' recipient Hershel "Woody" Williams, 94. He was presented that award by President Truman in 1945 at the White House for his heroics fighting on Iwo Jima during WWII.

The memorial itself has a cutout in the shape of a saluting soldier. The backside has four panels — one representing Marietta, the second representing the unforgettable loss families suffer, the third depicts patriotism showing the raising of the American flag on Iwo Jima and the fourth panel honors the hallowed ground where they rest.

“This will be our 38th Gold Star Family Monument in the country,” said Williams. “What a fantastic place this is, it’s an ideal setting. The public needs to know that sacrifices have been made so that we can be who we are and do what we do.”

Williams explained that there was nothing like this honoring the families until 2013. The first Gold Star monument was dedicated that year in Institute, West Virginia. Other communities then started to pick up on the idea. The monument dedicated in Gold Star Park will be the fifth monument in Ohio with two more in the process. There are also five monuments in West Virginia. There are only 14 states that don’t have a monument or are not currently working on one.

“This monument is for those in the communities that gave more than us. By erecting this monument, this community is accomplishing a feeling of hope and assurance,” stated Williams. “This memorial should serve as a reminder that we are free because of them. It is this sort of program for recognition and honor of Gold Star families that remind us of who we are, where we are and that we are blessed every day because they made it possible.”

Another honored speaker at the dedication was Karen Kelly, a Gold Star mother who lost her son, Robert Kelly, in Afghanistan in 2010. She is the wife of current White House Chief of Staff John Kelly.

“I’m honored that the people of Marietta are recognizing Gold Star families,” said Kelly. “The fact that Woody’s dream is coming true is a beautiful thing.”

“We Gold Star families have lost our sons, daughters, husbands and wives but we are not alone in our pain,” assured Kelly. “The men and women our children and spouses served with also feel the pain and loss. They lost their brothers and sisters in arms... their friends, mentors and confidants. They’ve lost leaders they never will forget.”

“From the very moment we learn of our loss, all of our lives changed forever. We did not know that the pain would ever leave us,” said Kelly. “This monument honors Gold Star families and their pain and sacrifices. It is my hope that this memorial will become a place of healing and friendship. That those who come here will connect with other families and share stories of the loved ones they have lost. As long as we speak of them, they are not gone.”

According to Roy Trembly, Commandant for the Sgt. Bob O’Malley Detachment Marine Corps League 1436 and committee co-chair, they started the local Gold Star Memorial project last July. Groundbreaking actually took place last October.

“This is a happy day,” expressed David Smith, the other committee co-chair. “We’ve been working towards this. We’re proud of the part that we’ve been able to play in this. This park is the perfect setting for the monument. The purpose is to give families a quiet place to come and reflect and remember.”

Retired U.S. Army Capt. James McCormick served as Master of Ceremonies.

“By having this event, we honor the families and their sacrifices,” stated McCormick. “I was shot three times, but that is nothing compared to what they sacrificed.” McCormick is well decorated and has three Purple Hearts.

“It’s not a lot to ask for us to remember what they gave. It’s so much more than just a monument, a name on a wall or a flag,” said McCormick. “It really represents who we are as American people.

We are willing to sacrifice anything for freedom.”

Marietta Mayor Joe Mathews commented that he thought it was a beautiful and fantastic event, was happy that a great crowd attended and was honored to have Woody Williams here to celebrate with us.

U.S. Congressman Bill Johnson agreed that it was a special day.

“I served 26 and a half years in the U.S. Air Force and love this country with all my heart,” expressed Johnson. “I lost a first cousin so my family knows the grief of losing a loved one in service to our country.”

“This is an important memorial. We have to teach what freedom costs to future generations,” said Johnson. “This will be here for kids and grandkids and future generations to see and learn that freedom is not free. It comes with a price.”

Jesse Ault passed away in Iraq in 2008 at age 28. His best friend in high school was Travis Russell. They did everything together.

“We were best friends and joined the Army together, shared Russell, who now lives in Williamstown.

Jesse’s mother, Ginny Billiter of Greenback, West Virginia was going to be in town for the Gold Star Memorial dedication and sent the info to Travis. He came up from behind her at the dedication and surprised her. He also brought his wife and two kids. They all wore shirts in memory of Jesse. Some had “Chap” on the shirts, which was Jesse’s nickname.

“It’s great that they do this for Gold Star families,” said Russell. “She’s been through a lot. There will never be another one like Jesse. He was always a good friend and dependable. You could always lean on him.”

“I’m glad to see people honor my son and others who gave their lives,” commented Billiter. “I’m happy to see so many people show up and I'm glad to see my son's best friend and family. Travis surprised me. I let him know about this but wasn't sure if he would be here."

They got a chance to visit, share some laughs and catch up. She said her heart was full of a lot of happy memories.

The Gold Star Monument is now paid for, but will need maintenance. And they would like to add five benches, a walking path and other enhancements. The City of Marietta has set up a separate account that can accept donations or donations can be made through the Marine Corps League. If donating to the account, please note that it is for the Gold Star Monument.
